DOGS AS CUSTOMERS.

RESTAURANT WHERE SOUBRETTES' PETS ARE FED.

Are Taken to Their Meals by Messenger Boys—At Least a Hundred Dogs Fed Daily—Same Prices Charged For Dogs as Their Owners.

"Ethel must be out tonight," remarked a young man in a New York restaurant recently as a messenger boy attached to a diminutive dog entered the place.

"How do you know that?" asked his chum.

"Why, there's her dog, Bippo. She always leaves word for a messenger to take him to supper at 11 when she is dining."

The young man leaned forward and called softly: "Come here, Bippo! Bippo! Bippo!"

At the sound of his voice the dog sprang forward, wagging his tail in an ecstasy of recognition. But the messenger pulled him up short. By a swift jerk on his leading string Bippo was called peremptorily to order.

"Say, gents," said the messenger boy, "you can't call to dis pup now. Dis is business. He's got to eat and run. See? I've got seven other soubrettes' dogs starved to death, and I've got to get 'em all here by 12 o'clock."

Without further parley he turned to the waiter and exclaimed: "Make it a beef bone and a bit of liver! Quick!"

The dog and the messenger boy vanished down stairs. Within ten minutes' time no less than 15 dogs had arrived at the restaurant. Most of the dogs were accompanied by messenger boys, but one or two of them were with their mistresses.

After the fifteenth dog had put in an appearance the young man who had recognized Bippo called to the head waiter.

"It seems to me that you are going into the dog business on rather a large scale," he said.

The waiter laughed.

"Well, you see it's like this, sir: We can't afford to offend our regular patrons, and there's no surer way of offending a woman than by turning down her dog. Lots of our patrons live in apartments and get all their meals out. They can't be bothered looking after their dogs' meals themselves, and so they send them over to us. There's some bother about it, but it opens up a fine market for our scraps, and as in the course of a day we usually feed at least 100 dogs, and we charge them exactly the same prices as their owners have to pay, you see it isn't altogether a losing investment. In fact, you will find when you take the messenger charges into consideration that the mistress often pays more for the dog's meals than she does for her own. Of course some of them bring the dogs over themselves, and there are a few others who make their husbands or a friend bring them. That never keeps up for long. The man always kicks against the indignity of it sooner or later, and then she has to bring the dog herself or send for the messenger again.

"If we were to refuse to feed these dogs, their owners would in all probability never enter our restaurant, whereas now, no matter how many new competitors may spring up, we are always sure of keeping the custom of the dog owners, more or less, for as far as I know ours is the only restaurant where dogs are taken as regular boarders at human rates."—New York Sun.

NEGRO COLLEGE GIRL.

Miss Hill First of Her Race to Enter Boston University.

The freshmen class of Boston university has among its members the first colored girl to enter the college of liberal arts as a regular candidate for the degree of A. B. She is Miss Ida Estella Hill of Millerton, N. Y., and is a worthy representative of the liberally educated young colored women of the country.

Miss Hill prepared for college at the Gilbert academy, Winsted, Conn., from which she was graduated with honors last June. Dr. Clarke is a Boston university graduate, and it was through his recommendation that she came to the institution on Beacon Hill. The several girls' secret societies, to be a member of which is a badge of social prestige, it is said, are all anxious to claim Miss Hill as a sister.

Miss Hill is exceedingly attractive. She has a very engaging manner, and her gowns show a taste that is remarkable. She is petite, pretty and graceful and is regarded as a decided acquisition to the social life of the college.—Philadelphia Press.

A RIGHT ROYAL ROBE.

Made of Rare Feathers For the Ruler of the Sandwich Islands.

A million dollars seems a pretty round sum to pay for a cloak, and probably even Worth never dreamed of asking so fabulous a price for the most elaborate of his garments. And yet in the National museum at Washington is a cloak the cost of which cannot be reckoned at less than this vast amount, and ladies may be pleased to learn that it was not a woman, but a man, who was guilty of such a piece of extravagance.

Long years ago, when the Hawaiian Islands, small as they are, supported not one but several flourishing kingdoms, the kings, chiefs and nobles, whenever they appeared in public on state occasions, wore, instead of the purple and ermine of more civilized potentates, capes and cloaks of brilliant feathers. The ladies of the court were forced to content themselves with feather boas, as we should call them, known as leis. These capes and collars were made from the yellow, red and black feathers of a few species of small birds peculiar to the Sandwich Islands and called, from their habits, honey suckers. Fashion ruled even in those days, and as the yellow feathers were scarcer than the red yellow was the fashionable color, and the more powerful the chief the more yellow was his robe of state. These yellow feathers were found only on two or three species of birds, the finest coming from a bird called in the native language mamo and known as Drepanis pacifica by ornithologists.

These birds, with their striking black and yellow plumage, were as dear to the hearts of the Hawaiian monarchs as they might be today to the hearts of patriotic Princeton students and were sought for far and near throughout the islands. The populace paid poll taxes in golden feathers instead of golden dollars, and as each bird furnished but a few feathers the taxes may be considered as having been high. Some estimate of the value of the feathers may be formed from the prices paid in later times, when a piece of nankeen cloth valued at $1.50 was the equivalent of five feathers; but, after all, the great element in the cost of these cloaks was time and labor, since the making of a single cloak required from 50 to 100 years.

As the feathers obtained for taxes were very far from supplying the demand the chiefs were accustomed to employ a regular staff of bird catchers, much as a mediæval baron had his staff of falconers. These skilled foresters prepared a sort of bird lime from the gum of the fragrant olapa, mixed with the juice of the breadfruit tree, and with it smeared the branches of the flowering trees frequented by the honey suckers. —Frederic A. Lucas in St. Nicholas.

METHOD IN HIS MADNESS.

Police Officers Who Humored a Man Found Out Their Error.

A tall, slim man, with a vacant stare, walked into the police station of a western city, stepped up to the officer on duty and said in a hollow voice:

"Sir, I have an important communication to make. I am dead. I was murdered, and I entreat you to find the murderer and have me buried."

The official started back. It was evident he had a lunatic before him. He rang a bell, and the captain of the division, the police surgeon and all the constables obeyed the summons. In a moment the room was packed with a crowd of persons, all anxiously looking toward the surgeon, who, in such cases, has the first word.

"Just so," the latter said, addressing the stranger. "I could tell at a glance you were dead. Do you happen to know your name?"

"Certainly," the maniac replied. "My name is Berthold Lenwarz."

"And your address?"

"The grave."

"Who is the murderer?"

"Columbus."

"The same as discovered America?"

"Yes."

"Then let me congratulate you. We have captured the smart chap. Come, I will show you to his cell."

"Directly," said the madman in reply to the surgeon's diplomatic little speech and began fumbling in his pocket, from which he quickly produced a thick packet of neatly bound almanacs. "Gentlemen, when I was alive, I used to sell these almanacs. They are the best sold in this country and only cost threepence each. You will admit that these handsome little volumes ought not to be left to molder in the grave, and, as we appear on such friendly terms, perhaps the gentlemen will not object to buy the lot."

Ten minutes later, almanacs all sold, he departed.—Scottish Nights.

At His Wits' End.

He sat in his office musing. "Now, here are two tickets for the theater tonight," he said. "If I ask Jones to go with me, I'm sure to find out when I get home to dinner that it's the only thing that's been here in a year that my wife really wants to see, and if I don't ask any one to go and plan to take her I'll learn when it's too late to make any change that nothing could hire her to sit through the old piece."

He puzzled his head over the question for an hour, and then he tossed up a quarter to decide what he would do, although he knew he would lose whichever way it came.—Chicago Post.

Made Bread of Bones.

According to Herault, during the siege of Paris by Henry IV a famine raged and bread sold at a crown a pound. When this was consumed, the people, maddened with hunger, exhumed the dried bones from the charnel house of the Holy Innocents and from these made a kind of bread.

A public school system was put in operation in nearly all the provinces of the Roman empire in the year 98.

We have heard of the adventures of a guinea. The story of a painting brought to Rome by Queen Christina of Sweden is not less interesting. The subject is Leda and her attendant nymphs attacked in a bath by swans. It was painted 367 years ago for the Duke of Mantua, and given by him to the Emperor Charles V. Philippa II took it from Italy to Spain. It was bought there by the sculptor Leone Leoni, who sold it to a picture dealer for the collection of the Emperor Rodolph II. The Swedes took it, with other spoils of the Seven Years' war, to Stockholm, where Christina took a fancy to it and with other treasures transported it to Rome. She left it to Cardinal Azzolino, who died a few months after it was handed over to him. It passed on to his nephew, and was sold by him to Prince Livio Odescalchi, who left it to a cousin, Prince Bardassone Odescalchi, who sold it to the Duc d'Orleans, regent of France.

His son Louis, duc d'Orleans, a pious prince, thought the head of Leda too pagan, and had it cut out. Coypel bought the painting and painted in a head from memory. He sold it to Pasquin, a collector, who sold it at a large profit to Frederick the Great. Marshal Davout took it from a Prussian palace and brought it back to Paris. It was there restored and given back to the king of Prussia in 1815. The head fell off the canvas on the way and a new head was inserted by Schlesinger. The picture is now in the possession of the German emperor, who is fascinated by the swans. As he likes to think himself a Lohengrin, this is as it should be. The curious thing is that the artist's name has not gone down to posterity, though the picture has been famous for so many centuries.—Paris Cor. London Truth.

Garlic.

About three-quarters of the garlic used in this country is imported from Italy. It comes in hampers containing about 110 pounds each. Garlic is raised in this country in Connecticut, in Louisiana, in Texas and in New Mexico. All garlic, both imported and American, is put up in strings or bunches something like the bunches in which onions were once commonly sold in this country, but much longer. American garlic is shipped in crates and barrels. Some from the far southwest comes in long cylindrical baskets.

Garlic is sold by the pound or by the single bulb, which is sold for a penny. In its commercial form, whole and dry, garlic does not yield the strong smell for which it is famous. In a wholesale produce establishment, where garlic was stacked up in quantities, there was no noticeable odor from it, bt if one of the several smaller bulbs of which each root is composed, and which are called cloves of garlic, be broken off and broken in two, the powerful odor becomes perceptible.

The aggregate consumption of garlic in this country is large, and our exports of it to South American countries, which include American garlic and imported garlic reshipped, amount to enough to be reckoned in tons.—New York Sun.

The Duel With Morgan O'Connell.

Alvanley's rare appearances in the house of lords made his best friends regret that he did not take an active part in politics. He showed himself a good and effective speaker, with an exceptional knowledge of Irish politics, on which he wrote a very able pamphlet. An awkward question he put to Lord Melbourne led to the memorable duel with Morgan O'Connell. The question irritated O'Connell pere, and, with his customary truculent coarseness, he denounced Alvanley in the commons as a bloated buffoon. As usual, there was some truth in it to give sting to the invective, but in any case the insult must have been followed by a challenge. The agitator declined to come out, and Alvanley threatened personal chastisement. Thereupon Morgan took up the glove on his father's behalf in a letter characterized by his father's scurrility.

They met, to exchange sundry shots and to part scatheless, but without any apology. Alvanley observed afterward: "What a clumsy fellow O'Connell must be to miss such a fat fellow as I am! He ought to practice at a haystack to get his hand in."—Cornhill Magazine.

What Was Hurt.

Many stories are told of the witty retorts made by a certain judge who died a few years ago, and among them is one which proves that his wit did not desert him in the most trying circumstances.

One day as he was walking down the steps which led from his town house he slipped, lost his footing and fell with many thumps and bumps to the bottom. A passerby hurried up to the judge as the latter slowly rose to his feet.

"I trust your honor is not seriously hurt?" he said in anxious inquiry.

"My honor is not at all hurt," returned the judge with a rueful expression, "but my elbows and knees are, I can assure you."—Pearson's Weekly.

French statistics show that there are now 2,150 women in France who earn their living as authors or writing for newspapers, while there are only 700 painters and sculptors of that sex. Among the writers are 1,000 novelists, 200 lyric poets and 150 who publish children's stories and educational works.

SONOMA, JANUARY 15, 1898.

"THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE NEVER DID RUN SMOOTHE."

MRS. SUSIE BAKER, who was divorced from her husband last March, recently applied to County Clerk Fulton for a license to wed Michael McDonough, who is over 70 years of age. The license was refused upon the grounds that the last Legislature passed an Act that divorced persons cannot be legally married within a year after securing a decree of divorce. Mrs. Baker, upon County Clerk Fulton's refusal to issue the license, commenced mandamus prrceedings before Judge Dougherty to compel the "Cupid" of Sonoma county to issue the much-coveted paper. On Monday last Honor handed down an opinion in the case which went against the coy couple. The Judge in his decision says, among other things: "It is conceded that the parties are of a marriageable age and that they were about to be married in Sonoma county. It is further admitted that Susie Baker was divorced by decree of this court on the 29th day of March, 1897, and that this fact was made known to the clerk when she made her application. In view of this fact becoming known to the clerk he refused to issue and deliver a license for the reason that the recent amendment to section 61 of the civil code would make her attempted marriage with Mr. McDonough illegal and void within one year from the rendition of the decree of divorce. Petitioner contends that this act has no application to her as it was passed subsequent to her divorce, and to so hold, would make the law retroactive in its effects and divest her of certain constitutional and inalienable rights. There is no merit in this contention."

JUDGE W. W. PORTER of Santa Rosa and one of the old genuine War Horses of Democracy of California and who has held many public positions of trust in this State, publishes a two-column article in defense of the late Judge Terry, who was killed by an imported gun fighter from Arizona named Nagle at Lathrop a number of years ago. Every man, woman or child whose pleasure it was to have known Judge Terry during his life-time, as the editor of the INDEX-TRIBUNE knew him, will agree with Judge Porter that David S. Terry "was by nature a gentle, kind-hearted man, with a high and stern sense of justice and a chivalrous devotion to those whom he believed to be ill-treated. His strong temper and strong opinions often led him into positions that gave a false idea of his character, but no one who knew David S. Terry ever found in him a dishonorable act or thought."

DURRANT'S remains have at last found a resting place in an urn from the crematory of Pasadena. The body was taken to that place on Tuesday and incinerated the following day. The refusal of the San Francisco crematories to have anything to do with the body is no credit to that city. The wretch had expiated his crime on the gallows and it was unchristian-like for any one to refuse the remains cremation. That he was a monster none can deny. If it were possible to resurrect, try, convict and hang him for the murder of his other victim, Minnie Williams, we would say "second the motion," but we submit that the action of the San Francisco crematories was revolting in the extreme to the finer sensibilities.

THE following clipping from a Dakota paper should be carefully read and studied by a great many people: "The price of this paper has not increased by the Dingley tariff bill, but we wish to correct the misapprehension of some of our readers, who appear to think it was placed on the free list."

MARK HANNA has been elected Senator from Ohio for both the short and long terms, notwithstanding the opposition of several Republican traitors to the party, with whom it was rule or ruin.

THERE is no doubt but that President McKinley's nomination of Judge McKenna for the Supreme Bench will receive the hearty support of a large majority of Congress. The objection raised against the nomination was sectional and of a most flimsy character, in view of the recognized ability and fitness of Judge McKenna.

THE first installment of school taxes in Sonoma county this year amounts to $57.670.37, being $3,700 more than the State apportionment, which is $54,010.59. This is the first time that Sonoma county has paid in more money than she received. It is expected, however, that the second installment will not be so large and that the apportionment received will be greater than the taxes paid to the State school fund.

COUNTY GLEANINGS

MRS. Precilla Wilson, one of Petaluma's liberal philanthropists, died at her home in that city on Thursday morning.

Peter Casovia has commenced foreclosure proceedings against F. B. Carmen in the Superior Court to recover the sum of $2,000 and interest on a promissory note.

Ray Miller, David McKenzie and Harold Belster, three young lads, were injured by an explosion of gas in the Sebastopol Methodist Church Wednesday evening. Escaping gas, ignited by a lamp, caused the accident.

Jessie Pickerell, a sixteen-year-old girl of Santa Rosa has disappeared and cannot be located. The girl, before leaving home, sent her father a letter in which she stated her intention of leaving and working for herself.

Joshua Chauvet shipped the last of his wine from Santa Rosa, Tuesday, says the Republican. The past season's product at his winery here was over 200,000 gallons, and the whole of it has gone to market. The last shipment was three carloads. Also, he manufactured over 4,000 gallons of brandy at Santa Rosa.

James Scudelatti, who shot himself at the Graver creamery at Valley Ford on Friday last, died from the effects of the wounds on Monday evening. During a rational moment the sufferer admitted that he fired the shot with suicidal intent, because he lost his job, and was sorry he did it. He had about $6,000 in a bank and was therefore in comfortable circumstances. He was a native of Switzerland, aged twenty-six years and unmarried. He had no relatives in this country, but had sisters and brothers in Switzerland.

D. E. McKinlay, the well-known lawyer of Santa Rosa, says the Press-Democrat, happened into Department One of the Superior Court on Thursday afternoon, and forgot that the janitors usually lock the court room when they get through dusting and sweeping. While Mr. McKinlay was engaged in the further end of the room the janitors turned the key in the lock. The attorney might have been left "all by his lonely" for some time had not the court room been connected with the County Clerk's office by means of a speaking tube, by which he was able to call for a key and was thus released from captivity.

The Birth of the Greater New York.

With the dawn of the new year the "Greater" New York is ushered into the world a full grown giant. The problem of municipal government is to be put to the supremest test. Within its limits is contained a population equal to that of thirteen of our sovereign States at our last census, and as numerous as that of the original thirteen States. Provisions for the life and health of this vast multitude of all nations and climes is an unsolved enigma. Thousands of sufferers in New York and elsewhere are wrested from the grasp of that agonizing complaint, rheumatism, by the timely use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is a preventive of malaria and kidney complaint, and a curative of liver complaint, constipation and nervousness.

Scrofula Swelling

On the Neck and Great Weakness Caused by Impure Blood—Was Constantly Growing Worse.

"When my son was 5 years old he was in very poor health and we could get nothing to relieve him. At the age of 7 years he began to complain of soreness on both sides of his neck and soon lumps began to gather on one side and grew to half the size of an egg. We then became more uneasy and began to doctor him for scrofula. He gradually grew worse, however, until at the age of twelve years we had lost all hope of his recovery. He became so weak he could sit up but a few minutes at a time. My wife saw Hood's Sarsaparilla recommended as a great blood purifier and we sent and got a bottle. We began giving our boy the medicine according to directions and it was not long before we saw he was improving. He continued taking it until he was in very good health. He is now 13 years old and is well. We recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for all troubles caused by impure blood." S. M. SILVER, Crouse, Oregon.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Get only Hood's.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

"The Snow, the Beautiful Snow."

The cold weather of the past month terminated on Tuesday evening last with a regular old fashioned Eastern snow storm and on Wednesday morning the mountains which surround Sonoma Valley on three sides were enveloped in a mantle of white. The weather the past two weeks has been the coldest ever experienced in this valley, in consequence of which the growth of grain and feed has been greatly retarded if not entirely arrested. However, no damage has been done to crops and a few days of rain and sunshine will start vegetation and ensure feed in plenty for stock and a fair yield of hay and grain.

Death of Chester Bethell.

Chester Bethell, ex-United States Bonded Warehouse Keeper in this place under the Cleveland administration, died very suddenly at his home in Santa Rosa on Friday night of last week. The circumstances connected with the death of Mr. Bethell, says the Press-Democrat, are very sad. Thursday evening he was if anything brighter than usual. A brother of his who resides in Contra Costa county arrived on that evening to stop over night. The family sat up till past 12 o'clock and spent a pleasant evening. Shortly after deceased retired he was taken with a fit of coughing. His wife arose and applied relief. A doctor was sent for and when he arrived he pronounced his patient suffering from an attack of paralysis of the heart. Soon afterwards he passed peacefully away. He remained unconscious up to the last. The deceased was well known and much respected.

The Firemen.

At the regular business meeting of the firemen held on Wednesday evening last the following officers were nominated to serve for the ensuing term: President, J. M. Cheney; Chief, J. E. Poppe; First Assistant Chief, G. S. Harris; Second Assistant Chief, G. A. Goess; Foreman Hook and Ladder Truck, Geo. Engler; Foreman Hose Cart, Geo. Breitenbnch, Foreman Engine, A. E. Leech; Secretary, Jas. H. Albertson; Treasurer, Henry Bates.

Sonoma County Atlas.

Owing to the large number of illustrations wanted for insertion in the atlas by other sections of the county the canvass in Sonoma Valley has been delayed. Mr. Craig will begin here next week and call on our prosperous citizens and explain the publication. It is expected that Sonoma and the valley will be well represented in the illustrated and descrtptive department. This work is receiving the aid of prominent people throughout the county and a large number of views have been made of residences, farms, wineries and business places for its pages.

The McGinty Estate.

The final account has been settled in the Jas. McGinty estate in Department One of the Superior Court of this county. The administrator's commission amounted to $256.41. Attorney J. M. Thompson and Judge A. G. Burnett get a fee of $25 and Attorney R. A. Poppe comes in for a counsul fee of $200 in the order of the court.

Another Aspirant for Sheriff.

The Healdsburg Tribune has commenced to boom Mr. R. K. Truitt of that place for the Republican nomination of Sheriff. The Tribune, in speaking of Mr. Truitt's candidacy, says that it is about time that end of the county received something better than the leavings from the political feast.

That L. Litzius is going to the Klondike in the spring and that Geo. Breitenbach is going with him. That this will leave only five vigorous kickers in town, to-wit: Station Agent Reed, Ed. Wegner, H. H. Granice, Ralph Perkins and Henry Weyl.

A most delightful affair was the assembly given by the younger set at Union Hall on Friday evening of last week. The large hall presented a very attractive appearance in its decorations of evergreens, bunting, ferns and potted plants. Around the walls were bamboo shoots artistically arranged. Bright lights and the vari-colored costumes of the ladies made a brilliant scene. The affair was as highly successful as it was pleasant. Music was furnished by San Francisco parties and pleased all who joined in the merry dance. Supper was served in the dining room adjoining the hall about midnight, after which dancing was continued until 1:30 A. M. Thus ending the first assembly of the new year.

A VERY ODD HOME.

WILLIE SAUTTER LIVED TWO YEARS IN A CELLAR.

He Was an Invalid From Childhood. Barred From Sunlight—Could Hardly Talk—His Strange Cycle Path—A Marvelous Cure.

The boy with the most unique dwelling place and playground in Greater New York is William Charles Sautter, the 10-year-old son of Dr. Charles F. Sautter, the proprietor of a drug store in Williamsburg. Little Willie Sautter lives in a cellar, has his playground in a cellar, and he has no playmates of his own age. It is seldom that he sees the light of day save as it sifts through the gratings about his subterranean home. Occasionally his father, who is his nurse, teacher, playmate and companion, takes him out for a drive, but Willie Sautter for nearly two years has stayed under the ground.

Willie Sautter has been an invalid from childhood. He lost the care and love of his mother when he was a wee baby and was thrown upon the love—sincere indeed—of female relatives. From birth the child was afflicted with a nervous disease which eventually developed into spinal meningitis. The little one was afflicted with spasms frequently and for years it was considered that his life was only a question of a few days at any time, but he struggled along in the care of various people without gaining any relief from his suffering until recently, when his father was told by physicians that there was no further hope for him. The life of this little boy was, and is, the life of Dr. Sautter. He made up his mind he would save the little weak boy, and he went about his task in a way that simply stupefied his friends.

Dr. Sautter's drug store is 25 feet wide and about 100 feet long. The cellar is hewn from solid rock and is as dry as a furnace. Before taking charge of the child Dr. Sautter—who had evolved an idea in his mind as to the proper method of treatment—boxed off a space in the front part of the cellar about 21 by 15 feet. This place he furnished up most luxuriously. On the floor he placed soft carpets, the walls he adorned with choice pictures and the furniture would do credit to any mansion in the world. He had cunningly concealed in almost every movable article of furniture music boxes.

When first Willie Sautter was placed in his new dwelling place he could scarcely utter an intelligible word. He was highly nervous, and almost every night he had spasms. His disease was diagnosed by his father as one requiring absolute rest and quiet. The little fellow was immediately taught that the little nest in the cellar belonged to him and that his playground was the big open cellar in the rear. Within a month after he was placed in his new home his spasms ceased and he began to grow and gain in weight.

Then began the tedious work of teaching him to speak. The boy was still intensely nervous. He continually twitched and squirmed and woke from his sleep uttering inarticulate sounds. But constant care soon impressed upon his receptive mind that he was in a place where there was nothing to bother him. For days and days he saw no face but the face of his father, heard no voice but the voice of his father—in fact, heard no sound but the sound of his father's voice, for his underground home is as securely hidden away from the noises of the streets as though it were at the bottom of the Atlantic ocean.

In a little while the boy was able to speak after a fashion. No one could understand him but the father, however, who spent hours with his little son, training him to utter words unfamiliar to the halting vocal organs. Then came an improvement strikingly noticeable, and Dr. Sautter felt encouraged, though his friends had warned him that the cellar home would be the death of the boy.

About six months ago the little fellow progressed so far in the knowledge of language that he was able to converse intelligently, and then his father would allow him to visit the store every few days. He discovered that Willie took a great interest in the big soda water fountain and that the interest thus engendered aroused an excitement that brought on all the old symptoms of nervousness. After some thought Dr. Sautter decided upon another novel move. He fixed up a soda water fountain in the cellar and turned it over to the care of his little boy.

This soda water fountain is a wonder in its way. In miniature it has all the attributes of a first class fountain—faucets, glasses, mirrors, marble fronts and everything else. After the fountain was in working order Dr. Sautter discovered that it was a great source of delight to the lone little boy. He wasted many a gallon of carbonated water, but the fountain occupied his time.

Some months since Dr. Sautter purchased for the little fellow a tricycle and laid out a course for him on the smooth stone floor of the cellar. At first the boy would not mount the machine. Now he can dodge posts with great skill, and he looks forward confidently to the day when his papa shall buy him a bicycle.

The theory Dr. Sautter has worked upon is that the boy required absolute quiet and rest. This he has enjoyed until he is now almost a robust youngster. From a ride every month in a carriage with his father he has reached a stage when he takes a ride once a week, gets home to his underground nest and sleeps 14 hours at a stretch. From all indications he will in another year be a robust, healthy member of the community.

And in all the time he has lived in his cellar home he has never taken a single dose of medicine.—New York Journal

A sea captain has found that the sails of a ship when filled with a number of small holes bear it along more rapidly than when they are perfectly whole. He says that an ordinary sail cannot receive the full force of the wind, owing to the bulk of stationary air that fills up the hollow of the concave canvas.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the Sonoma Index-Tribune and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietor of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

SEND IN YOUR NAMES AS SUBSCRIBERS

Provincial Breeding.

It is now universally conceded that the most undeniable mark of provincial breeding is to open conversation with a slight acquaintance—on meeting him or her—with the remark, "You do not remember me," or "I see that you have forgotten my name." It has been discovered that it was said by Lord Chesterfield, that prince of wits and most polished noble of his day, that a man must, indeed, have spent his life in the country whose circle of acquaintance is so small that he can put a name to each member of it the instant he sets eyes upon him. And the man who feels himself of such vast importance that his name must impress itself indelibly on the memory of the hearer, even when heard on more than one occasion, displays an ingenuous self satisfaction which reveals but slight knowledge of the vastness and constant occupations of the world of fashion and breeding. "A man's name," adds my lord, "is of no consequence whatever until his own charms and qualities have made him an intimate, and even then 'tis not his name that is remembered, but himself."

It is consequently absolutely proper, in addressing any but an old friend on meeting after even a slight lapse of time, that one should begin by saying casually one's own name, as, for instance, "I am Mr. (or Mrs.) ——; we met at So-and-so's last week (or last century)." The ease and grace with which these opening remarks are made are said to be the unmistakable stamp of the "caste of Vere de Vere."—American Queen.

Senses Sharpened In the Wilds.

I made bold to say to Dr. Nansen that thousands upon thousands of men who were not specially interested in arctic work had read his book with delight, and that to me the marvel was not that he could do what he did in the field, but that he could write such a book about his experiences.

"The best thing in it, to my notion," I said, "is your description of your dramatic meeting with Jackson on Franz Josef Land, and the best part of that was your reference to the manner in which the wild man's sharpened senses discovered the fragments of the soap which the civilized European had used in his morning ablutions."

"It is really true," replied Dr. Nansen, "that I could smell that soap as plainly as if it had been a strong perfume. Johansen noted the same thing when he came up. In fact, for several days our sense of smell was wonderfully acute. As I approached Jackson's hut I thought I could smell everything it contained and give a sort of inventory of its stores without entering. In a day or two this acuteness wore off and we became quite normal in that as well as other respects. But I wonder if a man were to live wild for a few years if his sense of smell would not become quite as keen as that of an animal?"—Cor. Chicago Times-Herald.

The Pickpocket's Death.

It is an evident fact that the body, when it has long been a slave to evil passions, finds it next to impossible to break its chains. The mind may passionately desire righteous living, but the abused nervous system, fallen into iron habits, refuses the soul's behest.

Canon Gore writes that he was once present at the deathbed of a pickpocket, a man who professed himself to be sincerely penitent and who believed in the forgiveness of sins.

He had said goodby to this world, and the clergyman sat by his side waiting for his last moment to come. Suddenly the sinking man exclaimed in a hoarse and painful whisper:

"Look out for your watch."

They were his last words. He had died in their utterance, and the clergyman's watch was found in his lifeless hand. He had not been able to resist the nearness of an article that could be stolen. His enfeebled will could not prevent the muscles from falling into their old habits, but his mind—his soul, shall we say—protested to the last.

When Character is Formed.

In many homes older children make the life of the smaller ones wretched much of the time. The writer knows a family where there are three children, the youngest about 2 years of age. The older ones seem to find no greater pleasure than to tease the babe on every opportunity, for she occasions them much merriment by her violent vocal and bodily expressions whenever she is tormented beyond endurance. One does not need to remain about this home long before seeing plainly that this child is being worried into an ugly disposition. Even at 2 years she has reached the point where she is intolerable much of the time, showing her unbalanced condition by flying into a passion over every little thing that occasions her displeasure. The attitude of the older children serves to keep her in a more or less constant state of fatigue, and the actions performed in this condition are rapidly forming habits, thus determining her character.—Professor M. V. O'Shea in Popular Science Monthly.
